Higher Standards

All predictions indicate that progress in every field of endeavor will make tremendous strides forward in the next 10 years. Demands on the intelligence, foresight, and knowledge of the leaders of the community, the young college students of today, will be as great as ever before in the history of our country.

Henry R. Luce, Editor-in-Chief of TIME Inc., foresees an American Age of Plenty within the next 10 years in which our living standard will pass the $500 billion mark, and in the same period, he predicts that if America and the world go on prospering together, the world's standard of living will pass the trillion dollar mark.

On the other hand Luce stressed that "a serious problem today in America is religious illiteracy." Luce warned that what is needed is "not just higher standards of living, but a passion for higher standards—standards of excellence in every field of life and thought and work." L. E.

Carol Longenecker Brings Varied Background To SAC

One of the most recent additions to the Santa Ana College faculty is Miss Carol Longenecker, instructor of Spanish and English. She is also adviser for the staff of the college year book, Del Ano.

Miss Longenecker graduated summa cum laude as a journalism major from Northwestern University on a scholarship granted to her by that institution. She also studied at Mexico City College, and Ohio State University. She taught at the University of Cincinnati, and UCLA where she did graduate work past her Master's degree. Miss Longenecker is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha Lambda Delta, and Chi Delta Phi.

Although school activities keep her busy, she plays a little golf, paints in oils, puts some time in playing the piano, at which she is fairly accomplished, and frequently visits Mexico.

Asked what subjects she would prefer to teach if she had the choice, Miss Longenecker said, "There is no subject I would rather teach than Spanish."

New College Catalog Issued

Increases in enrollment and the inclusion of more courses, prompted SAC Registrar, Genevieve Humiston to issue the revised Santa Ana College Catalog for 1955 - 56.

Many hours of planning and printing were spent in the production of the book. Five illustrations of department and student activities have been included. The cover plates in the distinctive red and black Don colors were made by the Santa Ana Engravers.

Richard D. Smith, head printer of the Santa Ana City Schools assisted by Carlton T. Fenton, set the type and printed the 94 page book.

The curricula section pertaining to required subjects for graduation is easy to read and find because of the use of bold face type.

A total of 3,150 copies of the catalog are being bound at the foundation Press in Santa Ana, and are being made available to assist in the registration for the second semester.

Sponsorship Of Nile Film Is Success

Sponsorship of the film "Kays Down the Nile", gave Business Club members practical experience in several fields pertaining to the business world according to Russ Bonney, club president.

Club members learned and practiced proper procedures of promoting through their advertising campaign. Accurate records of ticket sales and money collected had to be kept, enabling members to use their training in book-keeping. All of the members were able to practice salesmanship when selling tickets directly to the public. Co-operation with other clubs was experienced through the aid of the Newman Club, the Buccaneers, and the Vets Club, all of which helped sell tickets.

POPULAR DEMAND FOR J.C.s CAUSES RAPID DEVELOPMENT

(Editor's Note. This is the second of a series of three articles written by EL DON reporter Walt Taylor on the history of the junior college development.)

By Walt Taylor

Had it not been for popular demand of a higher educational finishing point than that afforded by high schools, the junior college today would probably still be an educators' pipe dream.

In 1915 the entire nation's junior college enrollment was only 2363 students. Following the First World War, however, a marked rise in the educational level of the American public was noticed. More people desired entrance into the arts and sciences. There was an equal increase in the desire to become trained for technological, professional, and semi-professional occupations.

This sudden hunger of the population to become more fully educated brought about a tremendous overflow of freshmen and sophomores in four-year colleges. Many of these were "unfitted" for the entire four years, but definitely needed the rounding-out courses of the first two.

Testing Grounds

Educators recognized the fact that the first two years of college were basically the testing grounds of a person's capacities—the proving point. Only 25 per cent of all junior college students even today go on to four-year schools. These educators became faced with three possibilities. They would have to either extend high school by two years, adopt a junior division of colleges to meet the needs of a finishing unit, or recognize an independent unit such as the junior college.

Beyond this were the demands of professional and semi-professional leaders in every phase of American life. They felt, and rightly so, that their employees should have the privilege of preparation for the work they were to make their life's vocation. The advance of technology required technological education of its workers.

Future Citizen

The need for training of the future citizen with a well rounded knowledge of history, literature, science, and art for competent meeting of responsibilities in national and community services, and the need for adults to regain these lost privileges was fully realized.

Distances to universities, especially in the Western States, and the increased expense of university attendance after the First World War made it financially impossible for many persons to attend schools away from home. Many parents wished to keep their children at home anyway, until they were more mature.

Businessmen wished to keep the community's wealth within the community. Employed persons supporting a family desired part-time assistance from easily accessible schools for more theoretical background in his field of work.

600,000 J.C. Students

All of these things, and many more minor factors, brought into prominent existence the community college, popularly called the junior college. Today there is a network throughout the nation of over 650 such schools, public and private, with a total enrollment close to 600,000 students.

Most of the public junior colleges in the country are based and operate on the Connecticut law for this sort of school:

The Junior College should aim to meet the needs of the community in which it is located, including preparation for higher institutions of learning, liberal arts education for those who are going on to no further than the two-year college course, vocational training for particular occupations, usually called semi-professional vocational and, where possible, short courses for adults as their interests and needs may determine.

Speech Tourney Termed Success

Drama Instructor Lee Ford said today that the First Eastern Conference Speech Tournament held at San Bernardino Valley College last week "was good experience for students from the various schools, who met and learned what other people are doing."

Illia Patterson of Mrs. Ada E. Benster's Speech class tied for first place in the Women's Oratory section. Goldie Burch won second place in extemporaneous speaking. Topics related to U. She had 45 minutes in which to prepare her speech.

Jack Ford won second place in men's interpretation of lyric and narrative poetry division. Ford had "The Listeners" by Walter de la Mare, and "Silence" by Edgar Lee Masters.

Darrell Mann entered the After Dinner Speaking division but did not place. The topics for this division were the quote, "On the threat of By-and-By, One arrives at the house of Never," from a poem by William E. Henley.

Hagan Heads Herpetological Society

Don student, Jack Hagan is famed as a snake photographer, and has been collecting snakes since 1941. He has collected snakes in every state west of the Mississippi, and in Japan and Okinawa during his Air Force service.

Hagan is president of the recently-formed Orange County Herpetological Society. Dr. Thad Thorson, Garden Grove veterinarian discussed reptilian diseases at a meeting of the society this month. Ronald Beltz, a former SAC student is secretary.

Carbon Dubs of Orange will conduct a lizard discussion at the February meeting. Eugene Ward of Santa Ana will speak on the rear fangs of snakes at the March session, and Don Johnson of Santa Ana will talk on alligators and crocodiles at the April meeting.

Future field trips are planned into the desert areas of several states. Hagan invited anyone with a reptile hobby to phone him at his home at 302 S. Sycamore Street, Santa Ana.

New Regulations Approved For ICC

The outgoing Inter-Club Council has recommended a more stringent set of regulations governing campus clubs which was adopted by the ICC and the Associated Students Executive Board at their last meetings of the semester.

To provide better attendance of club representatives at ICC meetings, one section of the revised regulations provides that a club may be suspended after two consecutive absences of its representative from ICC meetings. Each club on the campus will be provided with a copy of the new regulations.

Don Meyer, newly elected AS vice president asked for the co-operation of the clubs in carrying on an active spring calendar movement by ICC.

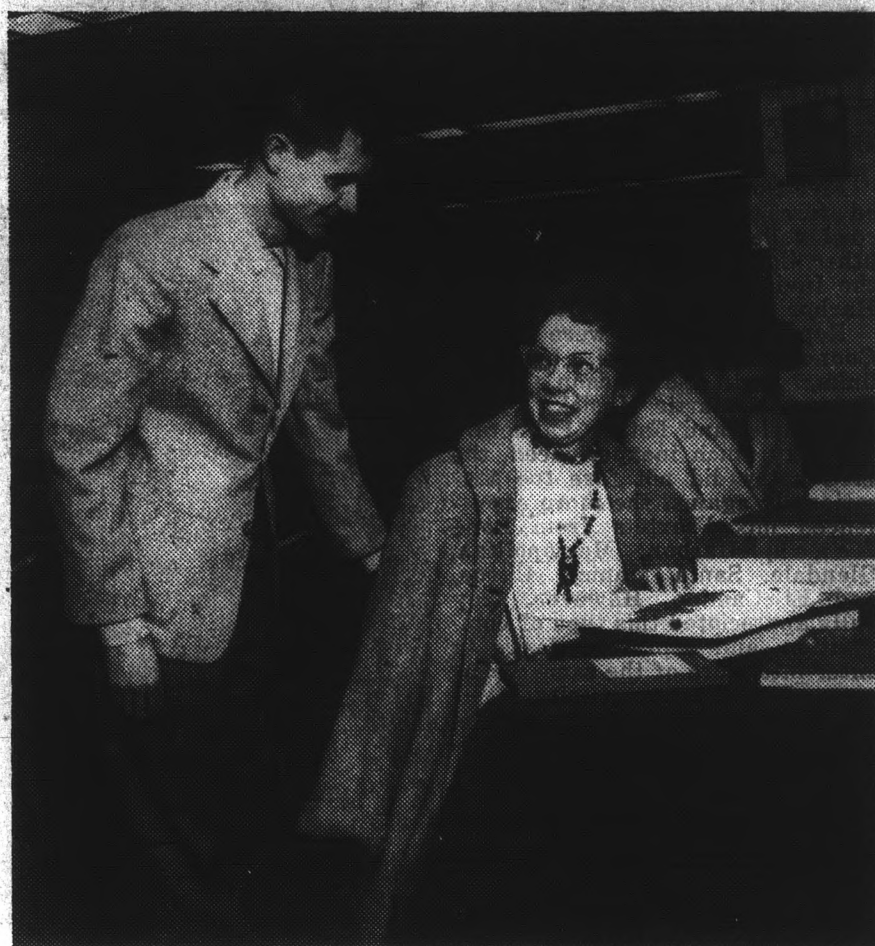

B.E. Instructor Returning To SAC

PRESS CLUB CONSTITUTION APPROVED

The new constitution of the Press Club received approval from the Executive Board at their final meeting last Tuesday.

The club won't be a new institution in the annals of the college as it was active in 1938. The Press Club had an excellent history of student participation in campus affairs. A past President of the club Mr. John W. "Sky" Dunlap, is now assistant director of the College.

The aim of the club is to bring the field of communications closer to the students interested in that field.

The first scheduled meeting will be held January 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the faculty lounge. Election of officers will be the main purpose of the meeting.

TO CRAM OR NOT TO CRAM

By now it's hoped that students know that final examinations start at 2:00 this afternoon and continue on into next week.

Schedules are printed in this edition of El Don and posted elsewhere on campus, and cramming has begun; but wait a minute. Is cramming good, bad, or indifferent?

Miss Ruth Bardley, Santa Ana College Librarian, may have the answer in a few of the library's recent book arrivals, of which four are mentioned.

They have chapters included on ways to score well on college examinations. The books are Effective Study by Francis P. Robinson, So This is College by Paul H. Landis, College and You by Calvin S. Siffered, and The Enjoyment of Study by John Somerville.

Coed Volleyball Team Reveals Lack of Experience

Five Dons and three Donas joined forces Friday to vie against coed volleyball teams from seven other Southern California JCs in the Invitational Tournament at Harbor JC.

Representing SAC were Darrell Cooney, James Alessi, Len Zelinka, Jack Edmondson, Larry Holcombe, Martie Musick, Roberta Temple, and Esther Palmera.

Pretty much inexperienced, the SAC entry did not fare too sensationally against the more experienced mixed-sexes from Long Beach, Harbor, Metropolitan, Glendale, Santa Monica, Citrus, and El Camino. However, they fully appreciated this type of competition, and expressed desire to enter into more of the same whenever given the opportunity.

At Orange Coast Monday, Miss Rellstab and Esther Palmera represented the Donas in the annual Eastern Conference WAA Winter Meeting. It was decided here that Santa Ana would host the March 25 Volleyball Tournament at Long Beach.

Also arranged for Dona competition were six additional volleyball matches, six softball games, and seven tennis matches.

DONS-HORNETS CLASH TONIGHT

Tonight the Dons will have the envious task of trying to knock Fullerton's Hornets out of the top-ranking spot in the Eastern Conference Standings.

Winners over Mt. San Antonio, San Bernardino, and Orange Coast in their first three league encounters this season, the Hornets are attempting to capture their fifth consecutive conference crown.

Tonight's battle should be a real test of the Dons' cage power. In a non-conference scrap earlier in the season, without the services of high-scoring Jim Stanley, the SAC quintet dropped a 65-58 struggle to Fullerton on the Chaffey court.

Tonight's game will be played on the Fullerton court; it will start at approximately 8:00 p.m.

Cagemen Post 10th Win Of Season With 76-61 Triumph Over Riverside

Riverside brought to Santa Ana Friday evening a basketball team searching for their first conference victory in two seasons. They went home still searching, as Stu Inman's quintet dealt them a 76-61 defeat.

For one of the few times this season, the Dons were at no height disadvantage. During the first half, however, it appeared that they may have been at a slight over-confidence disadvantage. They seemed a little too sure of themselves. Each player was missing more than his share of shots that he didn't usually miss against a more formidable foe.

The 8 point 33-25 lead the Dons held at half-time was not as strong as it appeared. Riverside made a strong bid on returning to the court in the second half to overcome the Dons' advantage. After a couple of Tiger goals, however, Inman's men tightened their defense and allowed as few as possible Bengal attempts from inside the 20-foot perimeter.

This, in the end, proved to be the difference in the final score. Where the Riverside cagers were being forced to take many shots from 25, 30, and 35 feet away the SAC quintet's tricky play patterns were providing Mickey Sullivan and Jim Stanley with shorter pivot and set shots.

Both Sullivan and Stanley warmed the net with 18 points each. Chuck Lewis and Del Garrett, playing their usual strong floor game, registered in the double figures also with 12 and 11 points respectively.

The 76-61 win marked the Dons' 10th victory in 16 starts, and 2nd in 3 conference battles.

In a never-sure struggle preceding the varsity contest, Santa Ana's junior-varsity five was edged by an Orange Concorde Athletic Club team 53-49.

SECOND HALF JUMP, Erroll Petersen gaining tip from Riverside center. Dons held an 8 point advantage at this point, went on to win by 15 points, 76-61.

STANLEY AIDS SCORING PUNCH

One of the consistent high scorers on the Don hoop five is forward Jim Stanley, former El Toro Marine. Jim played basketball for the El Toro Marine squad and before he entered Uncle Sam's marine corps he played two years on the varsity hoop squad of Crispus Attucks High School in Indianapolis, Indiana.

The six foot freshman, besides getting his share of the points is a very good rebound man. Jim is a pre-law major at SAC and hopes to get his sheepskin at either Dayton University, the University of Indiana, or UCLA.

Mathews Plans To Join Track Team

Lee Mathews, a Bellflower High School graduate, is the number one reserve man on the Don basketball squad. Lee lettered in both track and basketball at Bellflower High. He intends to run the half-mile for the 1955 Don track squad. Although Lee is only six feet tall, he can jump with the six-and-a-half-foot boys.

Lee, a business major at SAC, would like to further his education at the University of California at Berkeley, and later enter the "jungle of the business world" as a Certified Public Accountant.

Practice For Spring Sports Progressing; Big Season Expected

Several of the baseball candidates have recently been working out when the weather has permitted. Daily sessions will start at the end of this semester.

The tennis team, having practiced little since before the holidays vacation, is eager to get started again. It has been expressed by several of the tennis enthusiasts on campus that the three courts on campus do not provide adequate facilities for the sport.

Trackmen have been getting in shape for the forthcoming season during their gym classes, but will attend regular two-hour practice sessions with the coming semester. They will be going after their second consecutive league title with the opening of the conference schedule.
